On-post family housing residents to get decal

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Motorists entering the family housing area on post are now required to display a special decal on the windshield of their vehicles. The new policy, announced during Friday's Town Hall meeting at the MG Robert B. Solomon Center, is aimed at alleviating parents' fears for the safety of their children.

Housing residents have been pushing for tighter security since last fall, when two attempted child abduction reports were investigated.

"The decals will assist law enforcement in checking who is supposed to be in the family housing area," said Lt. Col. Thomas Scovanner, Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security G3. "We want to keep people out of the housing areas who shouldn't be there."

Decals will be issued only to family housing residents and government employees who need access. The stickers are available during normal duty hours at Room 241 in the Strom Thurmond Building. A vehicle registration must be presented for each vehicle receiving a decal. Civilian contractors will not be issued a decal.

The decals are to be placed on the left-hand side of the front windshield.

"The intent is for everyone to have the same decal in the same location so law enforcement knows what to look for," said Emma Watson, director of Residential Communities Initiative. "Anyone who has to go into the housing area will be issued a decal."

Enforcement of the decals will be conducted during Family Day, Graduation Day and other special ceremonies and events at Hilton Field. On those days, military police will set up six checkpoints on roads entering and leaving family housing.

Last fall, there were two attempted child abductions reported. In the first case, a 10-year-old girl said she was approached by a stranger in a silver/gray Sports Utility Vehicle. The girl said the man instructed her to get into the SUV. She refused and fled home on her bike. The suspect was described as Hispanic with piercings in his lip and eyebrow.

The case is still open, according to Col. Lillian Dixon, garrison commander.

The second case, however, has been determined unfounded, Dixon said. In that incident, a 10-year-old boy said a man driving a pick-up tried to lure him

Black history reviewed, remembered during post luncheon

The MG Robert B. Solomon Center was packed full Tuesday in a celebration of African American/Black History Month hosted by the 165th Infantry Brigade.

Several art displays were on hand, along with paintings, books and collages honoring the contributions of African Americans, both military and civilian.

One display noted the achievements of African-American inventors responsible for inventing such items as the cellular car phone, straightening comb and Super Soaker water gun.

Other displays paid tribute to military groups such as the Tuskegee Airmen and Triple Nickles association, which had representatives present.

Those in attendance were treated to a buffet-style lunch and entertainment provided by the Dent Middle School Fine Arts and Media Enrichment Program's Chorus, Steel Pans Drum Ensemble and Dance Team, and the Ayoluwa African Dance Theatre, which made its third appearance at the celebration.

The Ayoluwa (meaning "joy of our people") African Dance Theatre is a non-profit community-based outreach cultural group now based in Savannah, Ga., which performs, teaches and practices traditional Guinea West African folklore.

The guest speaker for this year's event was Command Sgt. Maj. (Retired) Cravis Taybron Jr., who served 28 years in the Army before retiring in 1998 and is the chairman of the Samuel Council Chapter of the 555th Parachute Infantry Association Scholarship Program.

Taybron took the opportunity to speak about the theme for this year's event, "Carter G. Woodson and the Origins of Multiculturalism."

Ask the Garrison Commander

Exceptional family members; dining facilities

Col. Dixon

Q Does enrollment in the Exceptional Family Member Program have an adverse effect on my military career?

A Enrollment in EFMP does not adversely affect selection for promotion, schools or assignment. Information concerning enrollment in the EFMP or any of the data used in the program is not made available to selection boards.

Enrollment in the program allows assignment managers at Army personnel agencies to consider the documented medical and special education needs of EFM's in the assignment process.

When possible, Soldiers are assigned to an area where their EFM's needs can be met. This depends on a valid personnel requirement for the Soldier's grade and specialty, and eligibility for the tour.

All Soldiers are still eligible for worldwide assignment.

Q Are there any dining facilities on post where permanent party Soldiers can eat meals? If there is a DFAC for permanent party Soldiers, can family members eat there as well?

A Permanent party personnel assigned to a battalion with a supporting dining facility may eat in their unit dining facility. For example, permanent party Soldiers assigned to the 1st Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment may eat in the battalion's dining facility.

Permanent party Soldiers assigned to a unit without a supporting dining facility may eat in the AIT/Drill Sergeant School (Building 3210, 751-6509) dining facility Monday-Friday.

Family members and guests of military personnel may only eat in government dining facilities during the traditional Thanksgiving, Christmas and Army Birthday meal periods as advertised in the post newspaper. Family members and guests may not eat there at any other meal periods.

Further guidance may be found in AR 30-22 (the Army food program), DA PAM 30-22 (operating procedures for the Army food program) and Fort Jackson policy letter 4-1 (personnel authorized to subsist in government dining facilities).

Garrison Fact of the Week

The Exceptional Family Member Program is a military program designed to provide a comprehensive, coordinated, multi-agency approach for community support, housing, medical, educational and personnel services to families with special needs.

The program was originally established as the "Handicapped Dependent's Program" in 1979. The name was changed to the Exceptional Family Member Program in 1980. Enrollment in the program became mandatory, screening was implemented and the first regulation, AR 608-75 (Exceptional Family Member Program) was established in 1986.

What do you think is the most important issue facing the black community? Why?

Leon Chisolm
Retiree (Air Force)

"As I see it, education and employment. We're in the South where most employers are smaller companies. Until the smaller companies start hiring blacks, we'll have a labor issue."

"I think the upcoming elections are the most important issue. The question is, which candidate is best qualified to ensure that the rights afforded to the African American community are being upheld."

Shanicka Lee
AAFES

"I think the most important issue is unity. Black people aren't as unified as they used to be. We used to stick together to fight issues, now we're fighting each other. That also reflects poorly on black people in general."

"To me the most important issue is supporting each other. In order to succeed, you have to have a support system surrounding you."

Glenn Watts
Retiree (Air Force)

"Job opportunities and education. These issues go hand in hand. I believe you improve the world through children. You do it with education and by giving them the opportunity to advance themselves."

DES Hall of Fame inducts first two members

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Two of Fort Jackson's finest emergency personnel were immortalized last week in the directorate's inaugural hall of fame.

The Directorate of Emergency Services Hall of Fame kicked off Feb. 6 at the NCO Club with the induction of Roy Warren, former assistant fire department chief, and Richard Hankins, former first sergeant of the 138th Military Police Company.

"We created the hall of fame to help promote cohesion among the different branches of DES," said Sgt. 1st Class Richard Crawley, DES Operations. "It also establishes something for others to strive for."

There is no quota for the number of inductions each year, Crawley said. Inductees can be nominated from within the Fort Jackson community. DES includes the Provost Marshal Office, 17th Military Police Detachment, Department of the Army Police, Game Warden and Fire Department.

"We are looking for people who complement Army Values and those who not only come to work and fulfill their job description, but go above and beyond their job description," Crawley said.

Warren, a Vietnam veteran whose military occupational specialty was changed from construction utility worker to firefighter, came to Fort Jackson in the mid-1990s and was quickly thrown in the fire, literally.

On his second day of duty, Warren was working on a structural fire in the family housing area. During the next two weeks, he would be called on to fight two more separate fires in housing.

Warren is also remembered at Fort Jackson for helping to create the installation's 911 Call Center.

"He was instrumental in its design and operation to include establishment of response protocols and emergency event addressing databases that are still being used today," said Billy Forrester, Fort Jackson Fire Department chief. "His forethought and leadership from the beginning had a huge impact on its current operation today."

Following civilian firefighting stints at Fort Benjamin Harris, Ind., and Fort McCoy, Wis., Warren came to Columbia, where he would finish his career.

"In my life, I have had 37 years of firefighting experiences, which have left me with many fond memories to reflect back on during my retirement years," Warren said. "I have loved my time with my brother firefighters and would not change a day of my firefighting career."

Hankins, who served in the Military Police Corps between 1958 and 1979, ended his career at Fort Jackson as the first sergeant of the 138th MP Co. During his time here, he was instrumental in the design of the first

Before coming to Fort Jackson, Hankins served in Okinawa, Japan, where he was directly responsible for reducing the loss of government property at the largest depot in the Army from a high of $25 million in one year to just $300,000.

"It is a very humble experience. I couldn't have accomplished all I did without the support of my peers and supervisors," Hankins said.

Among his many accomplishments, in 1926, Woodson established Negro History Week (now known as Black History Month).

Only the second African American to earn a Ph.D. from Harvard, many feel Woodson's most visible legacy is that schools set aside time each year to focus on African-American history.

"Without ethnic or social diversity, there is no multiculturalism," Taybron said. "It is truly remarkable to think of the contributions of that one strong-principled man can make to society. Carter Godwin Woodson dedicated his life to learning and teaching and ... in the spirit of Dr. Woodson's teachings, we must embrace and celebrate our individual cultures and heritages and ensure every voice is heard and respected."

into his truck at Hill Street and Lee Road, in front of All South Federal Credit Union. The boy refused, went home and told his parents.

With the aid of surveillance camera recordings, investigators were able to locate the individual, Dixon said. The man passed a lie-detector test and upon further questioning was cleared.

Also during the Town Hall meeting, community members were told of more safety measures which have been taken.

In the event of an abduction, the Directorate of Emergency Services will notify the South Carolina Law Enforcement Division to initiate an Amber Alert if the initial investigation reveals the following: DES believes that a child has been abducted; the child is 17 years old or younger and law enforcement believes the child is in immediate danger of serious bodily harm or death; there is sufficient information available to disseminate to the public and surrounding law enforcement agencies.

Once an abduction on Fort Jackson has been reported, DES will notify all gates to stop all outbound traffic and search each vehicle. Also, the Installation Operations Center will be notified and information concerning the abduction would be broadcast over the post speaker system.

Should an attempted abduction or abduction take place, the IOC would activate the red ring-down phones to notify all commands, directorates, schools, youth activity centers, water park and tenant units. Also the message sign at the corner of Strom Thurmond and Jackson boulevards would be used to convey the information.

In addition to broadcasting alerts in the case of an abduction or attempted abduction, the installation has identified more than 20 vulnerable locations on Fort Jackson and have recommended mitigations. Those include installing additional call boxes, adding or repairing lighting, increasing law enforcement presence and educating children and parents on approved walking routes to and from school.

Customer Service Corner

CMS captures the customer's voice

Christina Garza

Community FIRST Coordinator

Part one of three: During the next three weeks, the Customer Service Corner will explain the origins of the Customer Management Services.

Do you know how well Fort Jackson is performing in support of the organizations and people who live, work and play on the installation?

If so, how do you think that performance is measured? Several years ago, in a "sidebar" conversation, the commanding general asked the deputy garrison commander how the garrison measured its performance.

The deputy's response addressed measures contained in regulations, pamphlets, circulars and standard operating procedures, along with some very limited, existing customer feedback programs.

With the dawning realization that most garrison performance measures were generated by the functional proponents themselves, the commanding general continued the discussion by describing the garrison's performance measurement system as a "self-licking ice cream cone."

The commanding general went on to say, "From here on out, you're only as good as I say you are. I don't mean me personally; I'm talking about all the customers you support who live, work and play on the installation."

At that point, the garrison leadership came to understand functional activity measures would be secondary to measures of customer satisfaction. Thus began a phased effort to develop a customer feedback program, using minimal resources, to accurately measure the "Voice of the Customer."

In the development of this program, we faced some key challenges such as; defining the customer base; developing a management process to integrate and report the information; and development of a tool to track customer satisfaction, corrective actions and follow-up.

The goal was to develop processes with the ability to measure, prioritize, integrate and report customer satisfaction to the garrison leadership and the supported commands.

The customer base was defined as individuals, constituency groups and mission commanders. The result of that effort is the Customer Management Services program, which consists of a comprehensive, three-tiered feedback system based on input from the customer base — the "Voice" of the Army's people.

The first tier of this process is the Interactive Customer Evaluation system, developed by the Department of Defense.

The second tier of the program needs to be a continuous process to address collective issues or concerns that could not be resolved by ICE.

Finally the third, and perhaps most important tier, is the need to gather feedback from the corporate-level customers (mission commanders) supported by the garrison.

Author's Note: Next week's segment will discuss the three-tiered process in detail.

ICE Appreciation

The garrison would like to congratulate the Defense Military Pay Office, specifically the Finance Customer Service Section, and the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center. They have achieved a 4.87 and a 4.82 rating, respectively, in employee/staff attitude out of a possible 5.0, for a 12-week period. This is an outstanding performance in customer satisfaction. Keep up the good work.

Testing for recruiting incentives under way

Recruiting Command Public Affairs
Army News Service

FORT KNOX, Ky. — The Army has begun a pilot program in five cities offering qualified recruits a down payment for home ownership or seed money to start their own business.

The Army Advantage Fund offers those enlisting in the active Army up to $40,000 for a five-plus year enlistment. Recruits enlisting in the Reserve component are eligible for up to $20,000 for a five-plus year enlistment.

The recruiting program is currently being tested in five markets: Albany, N.Y.; Cleveland, Ohio; Montgomery, Ala.; San Antonio, Texas and Seattle, Wash.

Availability of the program on a national level will be based on the pilot results, Army Accessions Command officials said. The Army is the only branch of service currently offering this benefit.

“The Army has a long legacy of preparing young Americans for success through skills training and education-based programs such as the GI Bill and the Army College Fund,” said Lt. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general, U.S. Army Accessions Command.

“This new offering demonstrates the Army continues to understand what young Americans consider critical to their future,” he said.

Studies show home and business ownership is highly appealing to young Americans. While recognizing the difficulty in becoming a home owner, nearly all young adults surveyed in the test markets (95 percent) agree that it is important for them to own a home, making it as high of a priority as having the right job skills (98 percent) and having a college degree (91 percent).

A recent survey of young Americans in the test markets shows that six in 10 young adults expect it to be more difficult for them to buy a home than their parents. Parents and adult influencers of those surveyed — 63 percent — show significant concern about the difficulty young adults will face when purchasing their first home.

Among all surveyed, 79 percent view having enough money to start a small business as a big problem. More than six in 10 young adults and parents say that the funding would most likely come from a bank loan.

By taking advantage of the Army Advantage Fund, participants may be able to either reduce or eliminate altogether the need for a bank loan to start a small business, Accessions Command officials said.

“What we are hearing from our young people and influencers is that, although it is essential to them to establish home ownership and get started down their chosen career path, many times they question how they will be able to accomplish it,” Freakley said. “The Army recognizes these challenges, and wants to be a part of the solution by offering young adults the proper funds which will allow them to live their American Dream.”

NTC leaps forward with joint integrated training

Casey Bain
Army News Service

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — The operations group at the National Training Center is now integrating joint air-ground assets into the training of brigade combat teams in the California desert.

One of the new training elements is the joint air-ground integration situational training exercise. The A-GI STX allows war fighters at the BCT level and below to focus on key targeting objectives they will use when they deploy in combat.

Some of those objectives include planning and executing the targeting process; conducting battle tracking; and conducting command and control operations in the three-dimensional battle space.

The joint A-GI STX training is led by the operations group at NTC and supported by U.S. Joint Forces Command’s Joint Fires Integration and Interoperability Team. The training concept allows units to work together with many joint assets to hone their skills and battle drills within the targeting process, said Maj. Thomas Hansbarger, JFIIT operational lead at NTC.

“NTC has taken on additional requirements to facilitate and integrate joint assets to achieve multiple service training objectives,” he said. “What NTC is doing here benefits the entire force, especially those preparing to deploy.”

The training was developed from lessons learned by combat teams that have already been in Iraq, said Lt. Col. Brad Stewart, NTC operations group chief of plans and operations.

“This training helps the brigades to shorten their learning curve once they’re in theater and ensures integration of joint assets so the commander can more efficiently leverage all capabilities on the battlefield,” he said.

The 3rd BCT, 1st Infantry Division, is the first unit this year to undergo the joint A-GI STX training. Leadership within the 3rd BCT says the training helped provide a realistic and rigorous joint training environment for the team.

That training, they say, will help better prepare them for the challenges they will face during operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

“This is the first time we’ve had a chance to train on some very unique missions with our joint brethren,” said 1st Lt. Michael Guay, fire support officer, Alpha Troop, 6-4 Cavalry, 3rd BCT, 1st Infantry Division.

“NTC has provided a great opportunity for our entire fire support team to come together and train. The whole team is participating in this fight and we’re working together to get better every day. This has been a really positive experience,” he said.

The primary training audience at NTC may be the Army, but all services provide crucial assets to facilitate the joint training environment. Those joint service participants gain experiences they can leverage when they deploy in theater.

“This is an excellent opportunity to bring together a comprehensive group of joint assets to train together for the reality that awaits in theater,” said Air Force Master Sgt. James Rigney, tactical air control party subject matter expert at JFIIT. “The Airmen who train here with the Army will refine mission-essential skills that will help them accomplish their job once in country.”

This joint A-GI STX training initiative demonstrates NTC’s ability to integrate service-specific training requirements into Army BCTs’ training rotations.

“We’ve learned when we come together as a team and focus on crucial joint training requirements, we can help each other accomplish multiple service training objectives,” Stewart said.

The flagpole that supports Old Glory in front of post headquarters formerly stood in the Court of Nations at the 1939 New York World's Fair where it flew the New York flag. The 100-foot steel pole was given to the installation in 1941 by New York Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia. Shortly after being erected in front of post headquarters, two privates who were former skyscraper workers were charged with painting the new flagpole with two coats of white paint, according to the Aug. 15, 1942 Army Times, Fort Jackson edition.

Chaplain Center and School celebrates 90 years

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

The Army's assistant chief of chaplains for Mobilization and Readiness likens the history of the U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School (USACHCS) to the tabernacle in the Old Testament as the nation of Israel wandered the desert — constantly on the move.

"It has a very unique pilgrimage compared to other service schools. It's moved 16 times since its inception during World War I," said Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) Douglas Lee, Office of Chief of Chaplains.

As one of the oldest service schools in the Department of Defense, USACHCS celebrated its 90th anniversary Friday. The Army Chaplain School was created Feb. 1918 at Fort Monroe, Va., to train chaplains to minister to Soldiers during World War I.

Other sites the school has called home include Harvard University; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Fort Benjamin Harris, Ind.; and the New York City area where it moved four times from 1951 to 1979 (Forts Slocum, Hamilton, Wadsworth and Fort Monmouth, N.J.).

Two major changes were made to the school during that 28 year period. In 1966, the Chaplain Assistant School merged with the Chaplain School and in 1973, the school was renamed the U.S.

Army Chaplain Center and School.

In 1996, the school moved again, landing at Fort Jackson.

"This history of the Army Chaplain School is imperfect mainly because we are imperfect," Lee said. "Fortunately there are some remarkable visions, great people, great ideas and great manifestations of faith throughout our (Chaplain Corps) history."

Lee pointed out that USACHCS is the largest school for training chaplains and chaplain assistants in the world. It has more than 16,000 graduates.

This year also marks the 50th anniversary of the Chaplain's Museum. Since its inception, it has made every move with the USACHCS.

"From the very beginning we have been very thorough in maintaining our history. This is why the museum, the library and the other parts of our chaplain center are very important to us," said Chaplain (Col.) Clarke McGriff, commandant, USACHCS. "The chaplaincy was actually founded in 1775, a year before our nation was born. It's such an important institution to the Army and to the nation."

McGriff will be a part of the USACHCS history yet to come. He has been named to be the first director of the Armed Forces Chaplain Center, the com-

Photography contest open to Fort Jackson youth

Theresa O'Hagan
Morale, Welfare and Recreation

The Boys & Girls Club of Fort Jackson encourages young photographers to enter their ImageMakers National Photography Contest. The competition is part of a nationwide search to identify talented, young photographers. The contest is part of a comprehensive initiative encouraging artistic skills, cultural enrichment and creativity in the medium of photography. To be eligible, participants must have had an active Child and Youth Services registration for at least three months.

Entries will be accepted in four age divisions: 9 years old and younger, 10-12 year olds, 13-15 year olds and 16-18 year olds. The photography must be in one of five categories: color process, black and white process, alternative process, digital or photo essay. Pictures will be judged by local photographers and selected photos will compete at the regional level and then advance to the national competition. Forty-five national members will be named and their photographs displayed in the ImageMaker's National Photography Contest traveling exhibition and at special Boys & Girls Club events throughout the year.

“By introducing members to photography, we are giving them priceless opportunities to express themselves in creative and unusual ways,” said Beverly Metcalfe, Youth Education Support Services director and key contact person for the competition. “The support of our sponsors will enable members to maximize their artistic talents and develop creative thinking to last a lifetime.” The deadline for submitting photos for the competition is March 3. Young photographers may turn in their photos at the Central Enrollment Office, Joe E. Mann Building; the Fort Jackson Youth Center; Scales Child Development Center or Hood Street CDC. ‘Team Ruckus’ set to invade Camp Lejeune

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

Three Fort Jackson Soldiers will travel to Camp Lejeune, N.C. March 28 to represent the Army in an International Sport Combat Federation Mixed Martial Arts competition against local Marine fighters.

Sgt. Anthony Wikstrom (170 pounds), Staff Sgt. John Heisler (185) and Staff Sgt. Julian Wiggins (205) will comprise Team Ruckus. Wikstrom and Heisler are Army combative instructors here, while Wiggins serves as a veterinary technician. Each Soldier has won multiple grappling championships.

The most experienced of the squad, this will be Wikstrom’s fifth MMA fight.

Wiggins recently placed fourth in the All-Army Combatives Tournament at Fort Benning, Ga., including a fight in the not-so-friendly confines of a ring. But this will be his first time in the cage.

“It’s just another fight,” he said. “The cage might be a little intimidating at first, but once the bell rings, all that nervousness will go out the door.”

Rules for the event will nearly mirror those of popular organizations such as the Ultimate Fighting Championship. Bouts will take place inside a cage, with fighters equipped with only shorts, a protective cup, a mouthpiece and 4-ounce fingerless gloves. Bouts will likely be three four-minute rounds with a one-minute rest period in between.

Ways to victory include knockout, technical knockout — including referee/doctor stoppage — submission or decision. While MMA allows techniques from many disciplines such as punches, kicks, joint locks and chokes, there are rules in place to protect the fighters’ safety.

Some of them are:

- No head-butting, eye gouging, hair pulling, biting or fish hooking (pulling an opponent’s cheek with a finger).
- No attacking the groin.
- No strikes to the back of the head, spinal area, kidneys or throat.
- No small-joint manipulation.

This will be Heisler’s first real MMA fight and he admitted to being a little nervous. He made it clear, however, that he is ready to bring the “Ruckus” to Jacksonville.

“I’m excited. I’ve been looking forward to it, working up to getting in the cage and fighting,” he said. “We practice what we preach and I’ll put it to the test. I’m nervous, but if I go in there confident in my training, I think I’ll be fine when they say, ‘fight.’”

Wikstrom said there will be a friendly rivalry between sister services, but hopes the exposure will be good for Army combatives as well as the sport of MMA.

“Hopefully it’ll make everybody look at our program and our fighters,” he said. “It should help bring it more to light.”

Heisler added that any Soldier stationed at Fort Jackson who wants to learn more about Army combatives or MMA is free to train at the facilities here.

For more information, please call 751-6409.

Sgt. Anthony Wikstrom is a Soldier like any other. Words like, “hooah,” and “roger,” are a regular part of his vocabulary, he eats in the dining facility and, for the most part, does what Soldiers do.

There is something a little different about this warrior, though. His “office” floor is padded from wall to wall and the rooms are full of grappling dummies and punching bags.

His unofficial uniform of the day is often a pair of Sprawl fight shorts and a T-shirt.

His daily drills consist of ankle locks and uppercuts.

Wikstrom, 27, Company B, 171st Infantry Brigade, is an Army combatives instructor at Fort Jackson who loves his job so much he travels long distances to work (and get punched in the face) on his days off.

With three amateur Mixed Martial Arts fights under his belt, he is heading to St. Louis Feb. 22 to represent the Army and Fort Jackson in a live televised event, “G.I.s vs. Joes II.” This card, held at the Saint Charles Family Arena, features U.S. Army Combative specialists and local MMA fighters. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Army Emergency Relief.

Col. Junio-Omaru Barber, U.S. Army Recruiting Command commander, said the Army is happy to be a part of this event supporting MMA, one of the country’s fastest-growing sports.

“We’re proud to represent a sport that allows athletes to demonstrate many of the shared values and qualities exemplified in the Army, including leadership, commitment to excellence and a desire to make a difference as members of their teams,” he said.

In a welterweight (170 pounds) affair, Wikstrom is scheduled to square off against the ever-dangerous To Be Announced.

“As of right now, I don’t know who my opponent will be. It’ll probably be one of those ‘hey, you’ type of things,” Wikstrom said. “But whatever they bring at me, I’m ready. We train hard here and we train all aspects of the fight.”

Wikstrom’s last fight was Dec. 15 in New Orleans. He traveled there with a group of fighters from Fort Benning, Ga., and disposed of opponent Russell McCume in less time than it took to tape his hands before the contest. After a brief exchange on the feet, Wikstrom took McCume down and finished him with a rear naked choke just a minute into the bout.

“He was a little bigger than me but I wasn’t worried about that,” Wikstrom said. “I went in there, did my game plan, used the jab, let him close the distance, took it to the ground and finished the fight — just like we teach the Soldiers here to do.”

Standing 6-1 and weighing close to 185 pounds, Wikstrom has the type of frame often described as “rangy” by fight pundits. He has to maintain a healthy lifestyle to not only stay close to his fighting weight of 170, but to maintain a high level of cardiovascular fitness. MMA is a combination of fighting techniques such as Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, boxing, wrestling and Muay Thai, and three four-minute rounds can seem like an eternity for the unprepared combatant.

Wikstrom regularly wakes up at 5:15 a.m. for his road work. He said an average training day consists of running, swimming, weight lifting, healthy eating and practice, practice, practice.

“After lunch one day we might train boxing or kickboxing for an hour,” he said. “After work we’ll go over some moves. Like, Monday might be Jiu-Jitsu, the next day might be just boxing, the next might be just grappling or practicing takedowns using the walls (to simulate being in a cage).”

Growing up in Hawaii, Wikstrom said fighting — and all of it a part of organized competition — was a way of life for him early on, so the transition into Army combatives and MMA seemed only natural.

He has added grappling — as evidenced by a nice cauliflower ear — to his Taekwondo and Kajukenbo (a martial art invented in Hawaii) skills to make himself a more well-rounded fighter. In today’s world of evolved MMA, it is essential to anyone who, like Wikstrom, holds aspirations of turning pro.

“I’m going to Korea in August and I’m still going to train,” he said. “I hope to go to Thailand to train in real Muay Thai, come back to the states, and hopefully represent the Army in some more fights and progress. After my next fight, I think I’ll be looking into going pro.”

It seems he is already well on his way to establishing a fan base. While many see “cage fighting” as brutal, 7-year-old Teyani Alvarez-Wikstrom just sees Daddy doing what does.

“She loves it; loves seeing me fight,” Wikstrom said. “She watched the last fight, called me up and was like, ‘Oh I saw you in the cage.’ It makes me proud to be able to do something like this.”

HEALTH

Finding, maintaining life's balance

TRICARE Management Activity

For a lot of people, the juggling of career and social life, friends and family, mind and body can make a balanced lifestyle difficult to achieve. Making an effort to achieve a better, healthier lifestyle balance is beneficial to both a person's mental and physical health.

Step one in achieving a healthier, more balanced lifestyle is to recognize potential sources of imbalance. Typical "candidates" for rebalancing are people who are working longer hours but accomplishing less; are physically out of shape; or are feeling stressed out much of the time.

Maintaining balance between competing priorities and taking care of the body's "machinery" can be viewed in much the same way as performing preventive maintenance on an automobile. Failure to do so could leave one broken down by the side of the road awaiting a "tow" at an inconvenient time.

A good way to start rebalancing is by focusing on one's physical condition. Now is a good time to schedule an appointment for preventive checkups. A primary care provider can help determine what kinds of checkups are needed based on age, sex and medical condition.

Next, the fuel supplied to the body should be examined. Most Americans have too many calories and too much fat in their diets. Focusing on getting more fresh fruits and vegetables and less fat on a daily basis can help arrest that trend toward the upper capacity of the bathroom scale.

The final step for the physical rebalancing is to get moving — literally. Regular exercise is an essential element of reducing or maintaining body weight, managing stress and achieving cardiovascular fitness. Walking the two blocks to the store for a loaf of bread or taking the stairs rather than the elevator are good ways to get started.

Managing stress to promote psychological health is the next most important step to take toward lifestyle balance.

Everyone experiences at least some stress every day. However, failure to manage that stress effectively may lead to adverse effects, such as increased stress and may even contribute to a host of physical ailments or worsening of chronic medical conditions.

Possible symptoms of unmanaged stress include: Frequent headaches; intestinal problems; sleep problems; change in appetite; tense muscles; fatigue; constant worry; irritability; feelings of depression and decreased ability to cope and make decisions.

Everybody should have a strategy for dealing with everyday stress. Regular exercise, maintaining health, breathing exercises and meditation are all common stress management techniques. Anyone suffering from persistent physical symptoms or who feel they need additional help with managing stress should consult his or her primary care providers.

Successfully dealing with life's many demands — and achieving lifestyle balance — requires figuring out what is most important and then prioritizing one's efforts toward achieving success in those "most important" areas while not neglecting other important aspects of life (like physical health).

Failing to find an appropriate balance between work (stay-at-home parents included) and other aspects of life can take a toll — both physically and emotionally.

While achieving lifestyle balance is not an easy or overnight task, the most important thing is to recognize the need and to get started.

Here are a few additional tips for becoming more balanced:

— Set priorities and decide what things really matter most. Set boundaries for each requirement and try to stick to them.

— Learn to say "no." If a new task will interfere with basic health maintenance or does not make the "most important" list, it may be best to decline a new opportunity to be able to succeed in a higher priority activity.

— Nobody's perfect. When balancing multiple important priorities, settling for a "good enough" rather than a perfect product may result in getting much more accomplished in the long run.

— Look for ways to manage time more efficiently. Efficient time management leads to increased productivity both at work and at home.

— Get enough sleep. Get exercise — even just a walk at lunch. Eat right. Get age- and gender-appropriate checkups.

— Plan time for relaxation, fun and vacation days. These things are much harder to accomplish without planning.

Bake sale food safety tips

1st Lt. William Amerson

Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Bake sales are a commonly used way for an organization to raise money. Organizations sponsoring a bake sale have a responsibility to the consumer to provide safe food. Although baked food items (cakes, cookies) present a lower risk of food-borne illness, under the right circumstances any food can be a carrier of disease. Taking the proper precautions can lower the risk significantly.

Transportation

— Vehicles used for transport should be clean and maintained in good sanitary condition.

— Food should be tightly wrapped to protect from dust, dirt and insects, — Food should not be transported with pets.

Packaging

— All food items must be pre-packaged on single service plates or trays (foam, plastic or paper).

— All items should be wrapped completely in plastic wrap, aluminum foil or other single service covering.

— Only containers approved for food storage should be used (no trash bags).

Hand washing

— Food handlers must wash their hands with warm running water and soap prior to handling food, frequently during the sale and after visiting the restroom.

— Hands should be washed thoroughly including wrists, palms, fingers, back of hands and fingernails.

— Rub hands together for at least 20 seconds.

— Rinse thoroughly and dry with a paper towel.

Cleaning and sanitizing

— All food contact surfaces must be cleaned with warm water and soap. Use a clean cloth or paper towels. Do not use sponges.

— After cleaning, the work surface should be sanitized with one half teaspoon of chlorine bleach to one quart of water.

Items for sale

Acceptable items for bake sales include ?breads (quick breads and yeast); cakes (except cheesecake or cream-filled); cookies; bars, muffins, candies, dried fruits, herbs and spices; cupcakes (except cream-filled) and fruit pies not requiring refrigeration.

Not acceptable are cheesecake; cream, custard or pumpkin pie; cream-filled cakes, cupcakes, muffins or doughnuts and frosting and fillings made with cream cheese. One should never offer home-canned foods at bake sales.

Food allergens

The eleven most common food allergens are milk, eggs, peanuts, tree nuts (walnuts, cashews, etc), strawberries, citrus, soy, wheat, melon, shellfish and fish.

Some people who are allergic or very sensitive to food can get an allergic reaction by touching or smelling food. Some allergic reactions can be severe and require hospitalization. Consider the following:

— Items containing all or some of these allergens should be labeled.

— Items containing allergens should be positioned away from other items or put on a separate table, if available.

— One or more people should be assigned to handle the sales of allergen free foods.

Pharmacies open on Saturday

On-post pharmacies will now be open Saturdays for customer convenience. The main hospital pharmacy will be open from 7:30 a.m. to noon and the refill pharmacy will be open from 9 a.m. to noon. To refill a prescription: call toll-free (866) 489-0950; call 751-2250; or visit online at <http://www.moncrief.amedd.army.mil>.

Pharmacy Refills

Refill prescriptions online at www.moncrief.amedd.army.mil. Look for "Pharmacy Refills Online" on the right side of the Web page. The Post Exchange Refill Pharmacy is the only site to pick up refills called in or ordered online. MEDDAC requires an authorization form to be completed and signed before a spouse, family member or friend can pick up someone else's prescriptions.

Online Formulary

The Department of Pharmacy has provided an online formulary, which can be viewed from any internet connection at <http://www.pharmacyonesource.com/fos/default.asp?L=69557&g=1>. This formulary can be printed out and taken to the doctor to make sure that MACH carries a specific medication.

MEDPROS Training

MEDPROS training will be held 1-4 p.m. on the third Friday of every month, at Moncrief Army Community Hospital, Room 9-83 (computer lab). For more information and to register, e-mail Jaclynnne.Smith@amedd.army.mil.

Valentine's Day traced

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John W. Mims
Deputy Installation Chaplain

Many of you are probably not old enough to remember the saying “If the Army wanted you to have a wife (or in today’s terms, spouse), it would have issued you one.” I really don’t know the origin of that saying, but I heard it from a first sergeant a long time ago.

The concept of only single Soldiers serving in the Army has a historical base that goes back to at least the time of Roman Emperor Claudius II. Back then, only single men had to serve in the Army. The emperor banned marriages because all the young men were getting married to avoid being drafted.

There just so happened to be a rogue priest by the name of Valentinus who ignored the ban and continued to perform marriages in secret. (Note the similarity between Valentinus and Valentine — maybe a connection.) This, of course had a tragic ending, in that the priest was caught and imprisoned. During his imprisonment, couples would visit and leave him notes — could those be the first Valentine cards? Well, coincidentally, Valentinus was beheaded on Feb 14, the date we now celebrate Valentine’s Day.

Through the centuries, there were other priests who went by the name, Valentinus. Legend has it that most were martyred “in the name of love” and one became a saint — St. Valentine. While the historical accuracy of these accounts may be suspect, we still find a kernel of truth in them.

A sacrifice made in the name of “love” continues to be a theme in life. Anyone in a relationship understands that there are sacrifices to be made and we gladly make them for the one we love.

Fortunately for all of us, the example of a loving sacrifice comes from a loving God. The love that we encounter from parents, grandparents, husbands, wives or significant others is a love which is first experienced from God.

Some might say that I have taken a secular day and forced religion on it — so be it. But love (not lust) is a unique human emotion that we all strive for — we need to love and we need to be loved. It is part of our makeup as humans.

So as you go about buying that box of chocolates or those dozen roses or whatever gift of affection you plan to provide to that unique person in your life, pause and thank God for having blessed you with someone who loves you, who sacrifices for you, who misses you when you are not there — maybe a wife, husband, boyfriend, girlfriend, mom or dad — someone who cares enough to say, “I love you.”

No, a significant other will not keep you out of the Army, but I pray in the Cases of the Week

Two Soldiers were arrested in connection with the theft of 10 compact discs from the main exchange. Both Soldiers were searched, taken to PMO, processed and released to their units.

Military Police arrested two Soldiers in connection with the theft of Government Property. The two Soldiers pumped gasoline from Victory fuel point into a privately owned vehicle, according to MPs. They were taken to PMO, processed and released to their unit.

A Soldier was issued two citations for drunken driving after failing three standard field sobriety tests following a traffic violation, according to the MPs. The MPs said they pulled over the motorist for continuously driving on the curb in the housing area. The Soldier, who refused to take a breathalyzer test, was taken to PMO, processed and released to his unit.

Tip of the Week

Privately owned weapons must be registered on post. The Military Police Administration, located at 5499 Jackson Blvd, will give away free gun locks for a limited time. The gun locks will be issued on a “first come — first serve” basis. The gun locks will be issued to Soldiers living on post first and will become available to Soldiers residing off post in two weeks.

LEGAL

Homeowners save if PMI can be canceled

Capt. Ryan H. Dodd
Legal Assistance Attorney

The average Soldier moves eight to 10 times throughout his or her career. As a Soldier moves from post to post and families begin to grow, Soldiers frequently begin to buy and sell houses.

To buy a house, the borrower must put down 20 percent on a home mortgage or most lenders will require Private Mortgage Insurance. PMI provides insurance protection to the lender in case the borrower defaults on the loan. It is paid monthly and is not tax deductible. For this reason, borrowers may want to get rid of PMI.

PMI is typically required on all loan transactions in which the loan to value ratio is 80 percent or greater. This means that if the house was purchased for $100,000 and the borrower had a down payment of less than $20,000, PMI will likely have to be paid.

The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998, which took effect in 1999, establishes rules for automatic termination and borrower cancellation of PMI on home mortgages.

These protections apply to home mortgages signed on or after July 1999. Lenders must terminate PMI, with certain exceptions, when 22 percent equity in the home based on the original property value is reached, if mortgage payments are current. These protections do not apply to Veteran's Affairs or government insured Federal Housing Administration loans or loans in which the lender paid PMI.

A lender cannot force a borrower to keep PMI on loans lower than 80 percent of the value. However, a lender will not cancel PMI automatically once the mortgage falls below the 80-percent level. It is up to the borrower to calculate this amount based on the remaining principal balance on the most recent mortgage statement divided by the purchase price of the home. If that number is below 80 percent, then call the lender and find out what the procedure is for removing PMI.

If the borrower has not paid on the loan for very long, he or she may still have PMI removed by virtue of appreciation. The lender will probably require a full appraisal, which will cost $300 or more.

If the remaining balance on the mortgage is lower than 80 percent of the total value of the house, PMI may be removed.

There are, however, several exceptions which allow a lender to continue charging PMI. For example, if the loan is "high risk" or the borrower has not been current on payments within the year prior to the time for termination or cancellation, lenders may continue charging PMI. PMI may also continue if there are

Legal Assistance Office

Fort Jackson's Legal Assistance Office is located in the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, 9475 Kershaw Road, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays. Appointments can be made by calling 751-4287.

The office accepts walk-ins for living wills, health care powers of attorney and durable powers of attorney, 1:30-3:30 p.m, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Walk-ins are welcome for general legal questions and are accepted 9-11 a.m., Thursdays.

other liens on the property. Ask the lender or mortgage service provider for more information about these requirements.

On a loan of $100,000 with 10 percent down ($10,000), PMI costs $40 a month. If PMI is cancelled, that is a saving of $480 a year and thousands of dollars for the remainder of the loan. Call the lender to find out exactly how much PMI is charged and if it can be terminated or canceled.

For more information, call the Federal Trade Commission toll free at 1-877-FTC-Help or go to the Web site at www.ftc.gov.

If you have any further questions about this or any other legal issue, call the Legal Assistance Office at 751-4287 to set up an appointment.
